

What is Agriculture?

Agriculture is everywhere. Agriculture is a long word so it is frequently shortened to "ag." Agriculture can be difficult to define so to make things easier just remember that agriculture is everywhere! We use ag products while we sleep (cotton sheets), when we get dressed (clothes), when we take a bath (soap), when we eat (food), when we use paper (tree crops), and yes, even when we stop to smell the roses (floriculture). One of the best ways to remember what agriculture means is to remember the 5 F's.

Agriculture is farming, food, fabric, forestry, and yes, flowers. Those words bring to mind lots of images, the things you use everyday. Write down all the things you have touched, eaten, or used, that are agricultural products. Agriculture, it's everywhere!

A hand-drawn illustration of a farm scene with a barn, silo, and trees, positioned at the top right of a large rectangular writing area. The writing area is enclosed by a double-line border and contains 15 horizontal lines for text.